

"DOUBLE DUTY"

Lieutenant Patrick Brogan and his partner Jack Haldane, newly arrived from the NYPD for duty on the planet Alitorp, face one of the toughest crimes of their career.

Nissim, one of Demeter City's most notorious drug dealers is murdered, together with two of his heavies. It is clear from the bodies that the gangsters have been killed by a bloodthirsty alien. There are, however, no witnesses to the crime except Nissim's stunningly beautiful girlfriend Aleesha, a temptress who wears a strange double sided pendant around her neck representing good and evil. Aleesha claims to have heard, but not seen the horrendous murder.

One by one, the city's other drug dealers fall prey to the same hideous fate. Though Brogan and Haldane are often near the scene of these crimes they see no sign of the killer. Eventually the finger of suspicion points to the notorious drug baron Zano. Since Aleesha has ties to the underworld, Brogan and Haldane enlist her help in finding him. Aleesha leads Brogan and Haldane to Zano's headquarters for a showdown. Before a confrontation can erupt terrible screams are heard. Zano and his henchmen are found dead.

Back at the precinct Officer Jane Castle faces another day of unexpected encounters with a bizarre assortment of characters - in particular, a bag lady who claims to be royalty - a queen, no less, from a distant planet. The woman also claims to have been attacked in space and sold into slavery. She begs Jane to contact her loyal subjects at home and let them know that she is alright.

Meanwhile, Brogan is having his own problems at home. He suspects that his 14 year old son Matt has gotten himself into bad company. Matt has made friends with a classmate who comes from the notorious downtown area of the city. When Brogan catches his son with a strange substance he resolves to ban the friendship. Matt reveals the nature of his secret meetings with his new friend. They have been meeting to work on a school project about Greek drama. The boys proudly show him their handiwork - the twin masks of comedy and tragedy.

Suddenly Brogan's mind begins to race. He knows the murderer's identity! Like the Greek masks - and the double-sided pendant around her neck - there are two sides to Aleesha, good and evil. Aleesha can turn herself at will into a hideous alien killer!
